South + English Introduces Artful New Designs at High Point Market, April 24-30

Seeing High Point Through Rose Madder Glasses

HIGH POINT, NC – South + English returns to High Point Market, April 24-30, unveiling a dozen new furniture designs alongside an equally compelling selection of original art—all showcased in the brand's immersive flagship showroom at 210 E. MLK Jr. Dr.

Founded in 2020, South + English has always gone its own way. Co-founders Palmer Linwood Smith and David Ebbetts approach design as artists first, creating pieces that feel considered, effortless, and unapologetically bold. Five years in, the brand continues to move forward on its own terms—classic yet unconventional, refined yet instinctive.

This Market, South + English formally launches Art Tank, a concept previewed last autumn that explores the interplay of art and furniture. The Art Tank Tall Cabinet is fronted with original artwork by Linwood (Palmer Linwood Smith's brush name), while the Art Tank Low Cabinet features work by DJE (David Ebbetts). Each piece is both functional and expressive—art as furniture, furniture as art.

"David and I are both painters, designers, and creatives," says Smith. "A light bulb went off when we realized that art and furniture don't just coexist—they belong together. Art Tank was born."

Beyond the collection, the South + English showroom remains a High Point Market design destination. This season, the space is washed in Rose Madder, a deeply pigmented hue pulled from history and coursing with energy for today—somewhere between rose, burgundy, and brick.

"South + English backgrounds do not fade to the background," says Ebbetts. "Perspective matters. The view matters. In a painting, a showroom, a home, and a life, every detail shapes the experience."

High Point Market is furniture's grand stage, and South + English remains at its creative edge. Visit South + English at 210 E. MLK Jr. Dr. and experience a world where art and design happily mix and mingle.
